

PLENTY OF RAILWAY CARS NOW

Burlington President Urges Shippers to Use Them.

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—A warning to buyers and shippers generally, but especially those of the central and western states, to ship all the freight they can now, was issued today by Hale Holden, president of the Burlington route and one of the five members of the Railroads' War Board.

"The time to make hay is when the sun shines, and the best time to ship, under such conditions as those now existing, is when the railways have cars and the weather is good," said Mr. Holden. "The situation as to car supply is good now—better than at any time since the war began. On September 1 the total requisitions for cars throughout the country exceeded the surplus of cars by only 31,591 cars. This 'car shortage' is so small that it really means that the railways are now able to furnish practically all of the cars that are being ordered."
